

Excerpt from A Selection From the Writings of Joseph Hall: With Observations of Some Specialities in His Life, Written by His Own Hand The Editor of this volume has but little to say, in presenting it to the reader. The merits of Bishop Halls writings are too apparent to need a trumpeter, and the faults of his style - which are the faults of the best writers of his age, and not of ours - will not be lessened by any attempt at extenuation. Let them rather stand side by side, to offer their own encouragements and warnings to the writers who come after. The Editor believes, with one who has gone before him in a similar work, that few men with pen in hand are more innocently - and he will add, more profitably - employed, than he who is engaged in re-editing a good old book. Bacon must have had his eye on our times when he said, The opinion of plenty is among the causes of want, and the great quantity of books maketh a show rather of superfluity than lack; which surcharge, nevertheless, is not to be remedied by making no more books, but by making more good books, which, as the serpent of Moses, might devour the serpents of the enchanters. A good book is here offered to the public. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
