

This book is different than other childrens books about divorce. Lulu hated her parents fighting but didnt want them to get divorced. They did anyway. She felt confused, mad, and even sad. And finally a little bit better after a while. This book is for children going through a divorce, but it is also for parents and for therapists working with those children. There are questions to ask children at the end of every page and some tips for divorced parents and how to best help children at the end of the book. The biggest difference is that Lulu also questions Gods love for her and God sweetly helps her know He does and always will.
