

Excerpt from The Beauties of the Boyne: And Its Tributary, the Blackwater The materials for this book were collected during excursions, made from time to time, to the Boyne, for health, amusement, or instruction. With a desire to illustrate some of the scenery and antiquities of our native land, fragments of the original rough sketches were published in the Dublin University Magazine, among the series of Irish Rivers, now appearing in that periodical. Although the space allotted to such subjects in a serial did not permit of lengthened descriptions of any of the places of note which fringe this rivers banks, the interest which had been awakened by those rapid sketches of the Beauties of the Boyne, was such as to induce the Publisher to request that I would again visit the great river of Meath, make further observations, collect additional information, include the Black-water, and publish the materials thus obtained, in the form of an illustrated Hand-book for these charming but hitherto neglected streams. It may be regarded as a boast, but it is nevertheless incontrovertibly true, that the greatest amount of authentic Celtic history in the world, at present, is to be found in Ireland; nay more, we believe it cannot be gainsaid that no country in Europe, except the early kingdoms of Greece and Rome, possesses so much ancient written history as Ireland.
