

During the classical age of Greece, Herodotus wrote the first history text. But what he created was much more than this. Informed by his own travels, his historical work digresses more than it chronicles, with tales of the lands and peoples he visited. As Michael Ondaatje once famously suggested, "What you find in him are the cul-de-sacs within the sweep of history." In The Way of Herodotus, intrepid travel historian Justin Marozzi retraces the footsteps of Herodotus through the Mediterranean and Middle East, examining his 2,500-year-old observations about the cultures and places he visited, and finding echoes of his legacy reverberating to this day. It is a lively yet thought-provoking excursion into the world of Herodotus, with the man who invented history ever present, guiding the narrative with his discursive spirit.

What you've got to understand about Herodotus, Justin, is that he's not a man. He's a text. So says the Greek historian Marianna Koromila. It is a lively yet thought-provoking excursion into the world of Herodotus, with the man who invented history ever present, guiding the narrative. It's time for the travel two-step: First, deciding where in the world you'd like to go for your summer vacation. Second, finding the perfect travel.

Jeremy Seal is enthralled by travels with Herodotus. The Man Who Invented History also confirms Marozzi as a writer of real distinction and. But the lustre reflects both ways. In The Man Who Invented History: Travels with Herodotus, Marozzi visits the very places Herodotus saw. History books. The Man Who Invented History by Justin Marozzi. Marozzi connects the ancient and modern worlds in an entertaining way, says Natasha Tripney first historian, but also its first social historian, journalist and travel writer. Herodotus's reputation as the true father of history and not simply as. The Way of Herodotus: Travels with the Man Who Invented History Intrepid travel historian Justin Marozzi retraces the footsteps of Herodotus.
